As more information becomes available on the safety implications of using mobile technology while driving, states are enacting distracted driving legislation at a rapid pace.